They asked what had been done to the inside & I invited them in for a look around. As second we stepped in the door the older woman remarked: "It smells the same." Both women immediately zeroed in on the cabinet in the SW corner -- wherein were the Sunday school books & records & wherein I now have my papers. The older woman reported that she used to clean the inside of the Church. The older woman came right out and asked me if I went to Church. "Yes," said I, I am a member of the Baptist Church in Carbondale. The older woman: "Berean Baptist, oh yes." She seemed very pleased that I was/am a Baptist congregant & prattiquant. I walked them back to the Cemetery gate and that was that. Very friendly and easy. The older woman: "Well good-bye. Come down and see us when you get a chance."

Both women, as well as virtually everyone who has ever come into the Church, immediately noticed the "political poster" that is shown on the following page and which I had hanging above the double door in the main Hall. It dates from my Penn State days when I was elected to the Education Student Council. I have decided that the sign is too controversial and have, for that reason, taken it down & parted it down.
